4. System logs

These are internal event logs of the Website server, automatically recording page requests that are sent when Users use the Website. System logs include the page request sent by the User, IP address, browser type, browser language, date and time of the request, and at least one “cookie” that can uniquely identify the User's browser.

The data collected in system logs is used by us for an indefinite period of time, solely for the purpose of administering the Website. They are not transferred to third parties except in the circumstances described herein.

In connection with the use of the Website by Users, the Administrator may automatically collect and record in system logs technical details on the manner of use of the services, the requests sent by the User related to the provision of electronic services, IP address and technical data on the operation of the Website in connection with activities performed by the User. This includes, in particular, information about the beginning, end and scope of each use of the service provided electronically. The Administrator may also collect information to store it locally on the User's device using a browser memory mechanism.

5. Cookies

These are commonly used, small files containing a string of characters that are sent to and stored on the end device (e.g. computer, laptop, tablet, smartphone) used by the User when visiting the Website. This information is sent to the cache of the browser used, which sends it back the next time the User visits the Website. Cookies contain information necessary for the proper use of the Website. Most often they contain the name of the website they come from, the time they are stored on the end device and a unique number.

These cookies allow the Website to recognize a User's device and display the Website customized to the User's individual expectations, making it easier and more enjoyable to use its functionalities. Thanks to saving these files on the User's device, it is possible, among others, to remember login data, maintain a session after logging in, remember selected goods or services, or adjust to the User's preferences, such as content layout, language or its color.

Users using services provided electronically via the Website are informed about the processing of cookies by storing information or gaining access to information already stored in their telecommunications terminal equipment.

Users consent to the processing of cookies in particular by using the “ok” or “I understand” button, or by confirming that they have read the privacy and cookies policy. This consent may be withdrawn at any time, free of charge and as described in the section on cookie management.

6. What cookies do we use?

In the course of providing services to Users, we use professional technologies to collect and store information, such as cookies. There are mainly two categories of cookies used on the Rabbit Websites:

We distinguish between two categories of cookies in terms of their purpose:

- necessary files - these files enable proper functioning of the Website and functionalities that the User wants to use, e.g. authentication cookies. Without saving them on the User's device, using the Website is impossible,
- functional files - files enabling remembering the User's selected settings and adjusting them to the User's needs and preferences, e.g. with respect to the selected language, font size, website layout. They allow Rabbit to improve the functionality and performance of the site. Without them being stored on the User's device, the use of certain functionalities of the Website may be limited,

In terms of the period of their validity, we distinguish between two categories of cookies:

- session files - existing until the end of a given User session,
- persistent files - existing after the session is terminated by the User.

In terms of differentiating the entity that administers cookies, we distinguish:

- Rabbit cookies,
- third-party cookies.

7. Managing cookies and other information

Most browser settings by default allow the placement of cookies and other information on the end device. If the User does not agree to the saving of these files, it is necessary to change the settings of the Internet browser accordingly. It is possible to disable their saving for all connections from a given browser or for a specific site, and to delete them. The way the files are managed depends on the software used. Please refer to your browser settings for the current file management policy. For information about managing cookies on your mobile phone, see the User Guide for your phone.

Consent to the processing of cookies is voluntary. Please note, however, that restrictions on their use may impede or prevent you from using some of the functionalities of the Website.

8. Third-party cookies
